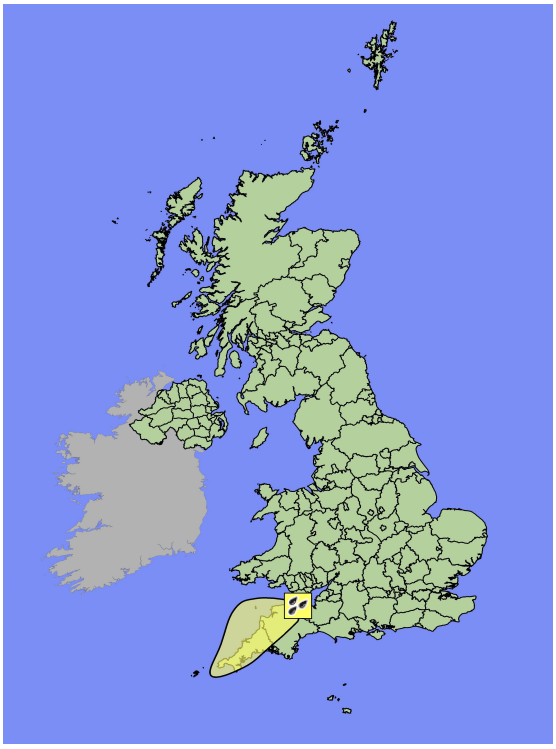
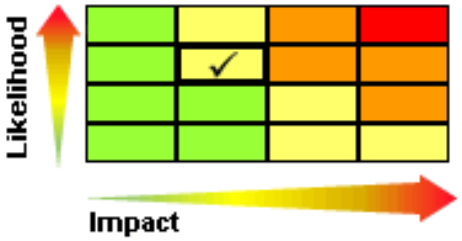
National Severe Weather Warning Service





CANCELLED

Chief Forecasters Assessment
A showery west to northwesterly airstream covers southern Britain at present. There are a couple of areas of enhanced shower activity - one early this afternoon, another more active band of showers expected during the evening, dying out during the early hours of Wednesday. Although the amounts of rain will not be excessive (typically 10-15 mm, perhaps locally around 25 mm over the Moors), some of the showers could be quite intense and given the wetness of the countryside, a few localised surface water flooding issues seem likely.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 16:00 on Tue, 04th Dec 2012 until 03:00 on Wed, 05th Dec 2012

Heavy showers will occur at times through Tuesday and into the early hours of Wednesday.

The public should be aware that the land remains largely saturated and so some surface water flooding may occur, although it is expected to be more localised and less disruptive than than during recent weeks. Hail may fall in some of the heavier showers, providing an additional hazard for motorists.
